WHERE SHOULD YOU PLANT YOUR TREES?

WRONG APPROACH

1. Large trees too close to house may loosen roofing, mar paint, clog gutters with leaves, and make the house look out of proportion.
2. This tree is not providing shade for the patio and may be interferring with neighbor's lawn and flowers.
3. A tree this close to the driveway may damage your car fender or low branches can scratch your car.
4. A tree this large detracts from the house and provides no other benefit.
5. These trees are interferring with the wires. A storm could easily disrupt electric service.

RIGHT APPROACH

1. Well-proportioned trees, not too close to the house, will provide shade and privacy without harm to roof and paint. The proper selection of shape and color will add to the appearance of your house.
2. This tree will be a functional part of your house and it shades the patio. A tree for this spot should be a clean tree that will not litter the patio.
3. The right tree here will frame the house and add interest to the overall landscaping.
4. Shrubs and evergreens make the property line look neat, add privacy, and small enough to keep under control.
